

Multilingualism and corporate life

Is the use of several languages within a company an asset, or, is one language enough to work with?

The Cervantes Institute, the Italian Institute, the Finnish Institute, the French Cultural Center, the German Institute in Stockholm as well as the Stockholm School of Economics student association are organizing a conference with invited expert speakers from different nationalities and background to discuss and debate on the importance of multilingualism in the corporate life, share points of view and discover initiatives to promote languages in Europe.

Date: may 12th 2011
